Passage – 2

The morning time is very pleasant. Dew drops glisten on the grass and trees and flowers shine bright and warm. The cool, fresh air is extremely delightful. The cheerful notes of birds fill us with infinite gladness. A walk at that time is very refreshing and is a healthy exercise.

I take my morning walk regularly. I usually go to the Public Park. Day before yesterday, I decided to go to the river for my morning walk. No sooner did cock crow than I got up from my bed. Looking at my watch, I was pleased to note that it was five. This was just the time to start. I was all alone, for I prefer going alone on a morning walk. As soon as I was out of the town, the cool and fresh air of the early dawn refreshed me. Birds greeted me from every bough; a lark sang in the sky and doves cooed from the branches of the trees. The green fields on either side of the road were covered with pearly dew-drops. The crops waved gently in the morning breeze.

On the way, I came across farmers driving their team of oxen to their fields. Many bullocks-carts, full of vegetables, fruits and corns, were creaking slowly to the market. Now and then, a cyclist with a number of cans, full of milk, was seen speeding away to his customers. As the sun appeared in the east, conches were blown in temples, and bells rang in churches.
